Transition Coalition Self-Study: Building a Transition Assessment Toolkit

Outcomes of the Transition Coalition Self-Study:

- Improved Indicator 13 data
- Improved student outcomes by strengthening transition planning
- Development of a transition assessment toolkit

A Transition Coalition Self-Study is:

- A team-directed professional development process that includes:
  - 6 weeks of applied learning, team discussions, reflection, and planning
  - 6 weeks of action plan implementation
- Teams alternate between learning on their own and group learning during team meetings
- Teams consist of 4-12 participants from a building or district, guided by a facilitator
- Team facilitators receive ongoing support from Transition Coalition; participate as a team member; coordinate team discussions and activities; ensure accountability; and collaborate with other facilitators online

Teams receive:

- Online webinars, conference calls, and a website to support team facilitators
- TC Self-Study print materials and guides
- Access to transition experts, free online materials, curricula, assessments, and other resources
- A certificate for 30 hours of TC training for each team member (including the facilitator) who completes the unit

Teams are required to:

- Identify a Self-Study Facilitator to participate in the orientation session and receive ongoing support from TC. The strongest facilitators have typically been district transition coordinators or district secondary coordinators.
- Identify a Team. Team members can include people involved in transition planning and services such as:
  - Secondary special education teachers
  - Transition coordinators
  - General secondary education teachers
  - Administrators (principal or sped director)
  - Related services professionals (speech & language, OT, PT, psychologist, etc.)
  - Guidance counselors
  - Vocational rehabilitation staff
  - Special education support staff (e.g., paraprofessionals)
  - Outside agency providers, such as VR or CIL staff
  - Parent(s) of a student with a disability
- Complete Self-Study activities within the specified time frame to achieve goals.
